Human Trafficking Pro Bono Project

Moore & Van Allen's Human Trafficking Pro Bono Project thanks its 90+ volunteers for their tremendous work on behalf of survivors.

In the last year alone, Project volunteers assisted survivors in over 40 matters. Recent successes include:

- Dismissal of several criminal charges in state court for conduct related to being trafficked. Justice for these innocent victims means they can pursue a job, housing and an education without the obstruction of a criminal record.
- Pursuit of visa status for several labor and sex trafficking clients, allowing them to stay in the country lawfully and providing comfort during a turbulent time in immigration policy.
- Advice to non-profits that support trafficking survivors on their corporate and real estate needs.
- Collaboration with government agencies to break down barriers to the healing process for survivors.
- Obtaining local counsel for several out-of-state victims who came to the Project seeking legal aid.

MVA continues to be a leading voice for trafficking victims' legal needs at conferences, in the press and before government bodies. Project leaders serve as a trusted resource for law enforcement and service providers across the country.

The Project's work goes beyond legal aid by hosting monthly career development programming for trafficking survivors, facilitating housing placements and supporting wrap-around service providers.
